Two best mates. Two bikes. One beautifully bonkers French adventure.

Join British comedy treasures Hugh Dennis and David Baddiel as they saddle up for the most scenic mid-life crisis television has ever seen. With forty years of friendship, a shared love of history, and wildly different attitudes to physical exertion, the pair embark on a two-wheeled odyssey across nearly 500 miles of stunning French countryside.

Starting on the windswept Atlantic coast and finishing on the sun-drenched shores of the Mediterranean, they wobble their way past Renaissance cities, medieval citadels, and sleepy canal towns—stopping for seafood, stories, and the occasional rest day disguised as cultural enrichment.

Along the way they unearth lost Rembrandts, confront family legacies, flirt with artisanal dyeing, and clash on the pétanque pitch. It's a journey packed with mischief, unexpected beauty, and the sort of disarmingly meaningful conversation that only happens when you're slightly out of breath.

Two Men on a Bike is a warm, witty and wonderfully meandering ride through history, friendship & the French countryside, proving that sometimes the best way forward is on two wheels, even if one of them has a dodgy knee.
